Welcome to Coffee to Go, where we center ourselves in the Scripture, seasons and holy days of the Christian tradition. I'm Karin Peter here with Blake Smith. And we both welcome you on this journey. So today is Good Friday, and for this Good Friday, we are simply going to hear the scripture passage and conclude with kind of a writing or a prayer that will be our blessing. And it's a piece that was written by Kathy Kay.

Blake Smith 01:01

Well, our Scripture today comes from the Gospel of John. And it is lengthy, but it's really important for us to hear this story and to kind of live in this here today on Good Friday. So it begins in the 18th chapter, and continues to the 19th chapter, the 30th Verse,

After Jesus had spoken these words, he went out with his disciples across the Kidron Valley, to a place where there was a garden, which he and his disciples entered. Now, Judas, who betrayed him, also knew the place because Jesus often met there with His disciples. So Judas brought a detachment of soldiers, together with police from the chief priests and the Pharisees, and they came there with lanterns and torches and weapons. Then Jesus, knowing all that was to happen to him came forward and asked them, "Whom are you looking for?" They answered, "Jesus of Nazareth." And Jesus replied, "I am he." Judas, who betrayed him was standing with them. When Jesus said to them, "I am he," they stepped back and fell to the ground. Again, he asked them, "Whom are you looking for?" And they said, "Jesus of Nazareth." Jesus answered, "I told you that I am he. So if you are looking for me, let these people go." This was to fulfill the word that he had spoken, 'I did not lose a single one of those whom you gave me.' Then Simon Peter, who had a sword, drew it struck the high priests slave and cut off his right ear. The slave's name was Malchus. Jesus said to Peter, "Put your sword back into a sheath, am I not to drink the cup that the Father has given me?" So the soldiers, their officer, and the Jewish police arrested Jesus and bound him? First, they took him to Annas, who was the father-in-law of Caiaphas, the high priest that year. Caiaphas was the one who had advised the Jews that it was better to have one person die for the people. Simon Peter, and another disciple, followed Jesus. Since that disciple was known to the high priest, he went with Jesus into the courtyard of the high priests, but Peter was standing outside at the gate. So the other disciple who was known to the high priest, went out, spoke to the woman who guarded the gate and brought Peter in. The woman said to Peter, "You are not also one of this man's disciples are you?" He said, "I am not." Now the slaves and the police had made a charcoal fire because it was cold, and they were standing around it and warming themselves. Peter also was standing with them and warming himself. Then the high priest questioned Jesus about his disciples and about his teaching, Jesus answered, "I have spoken openly to the world. I have always taught in synagogues and in the temple where all the Jews come together. I have said nothing in secret. Why do you ask me? Ask those who heard what I said to them? They know what I said." When he had said this, one of the police standing nearby struck Jesus on the face saying, "Is that how you answer the high priests?" Jesus answered, "If I have spoken wrongly, testify to the wrong, but if I have spoken rightly, why do you strike me?" Then Annas sent him bound to Caiaphas, the high priest. Now Simon Peter was standing and warming himself. They asked him, "You are not also one of his disciples are you?" He denied it and said, "I am not one of the slaves of the high priest." A relative of the man whose ear Peter had cut off asked, "Did I not see you in the garden with him?" Again, Peter denied it. And at that moment, the cock crowed. Then they took Jesus from Caiaphas to Pilate's headquarters. It was early in the morning. They themselves did not enter the headquarters so as to avoid ritual defilement, and to be able to eat the Passover. So Pilate went out to them and said, "What accusation do you bring against this man?" They answered, "If this man were not a criminal, we would not have handed him over to you." Pilate said to them, "Take him yourself and judge him according to your law." The Jews replied, "We are not permitted to put to death anyone." This was to fulfill what Jesus had said, when he indicated the kind of death he was to die. Then Pilate entered the headquarters again, summoned Jesus and asked him, "Are you the king of the Jews?" Jesus answered, "Do you ask this on your own, or did others tell you about me?" Pilate replied, "I am not a Jew, am I? Your own nation and the chief priests have handed you over to me? What have you done?" Jesus answered, "My kingdom does not belong to this world. If my kingdom belonged to this world, my followers would be fighting to keep me from being handed over to the Jews. But as it is, my kingdom is not from here." Pilate asked him, "So you are a king?" Jesus answered, "You say that I am a king. For this, I was born. And for this, I came into the world to testify to the truth. Everyone who belongs to the truth listens to my voice." Pilate asked him, "What is truth?" After he had said this, he went out to the Jews again and told them, "I find no case against him. But you have a custom that I release someone for you at the Passover. Do you want me to release for you the king of the Jews?" They shouted in reply, "Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas, was a rebel. Then Pilate took Jesus and had him flogged, and the soldiers wove a crown of thorns and put it on his head, and they dressed him in a purple robe. They kept coming up to him, saying, "Hail, King of the Jews," and striking him on the face. Pilate went out again and said to them, "Look, I am bringing him out to you to let you know that I find no case against him." So Jesus came out wearing the crown of thorns and the purple robe. Pilate said to them, "Behold the man." When the chief priests and the police saw him, they shouted, "Crucify Him, crucify him." Pilate said to them, "Take him yourself and crucify him, I find no case against him." The Jews answered him, "We have a law, and according to that law, He ought to die, because he has claimed to be the Son of God." Now, when Pilate heard this, he was more afraid than ever. He entered his headquarters again and asked Jesus, "Where are you from?" But Jesus gave him no answer. Pilate therefore said to him, "Do you refuse to speak to me? Do you not know that I have power to release you and power to crucify you?" Jesus answered him, "You would have no power over me unless it had been given you from above. Therefore, the one who handed me over to you is guilty of a greater sin." From then on, Pilate tried to release him, but the Jews cried out, "If you release this man, you are no friend of Caesar. Everyone who claims to be a king sets himself against Caesar." When Pilate heard these words, he brought Jesus outside and sat on the judge's bench at a place called the stone pavement, or in Hebrew Gabbatha. Now, it was the day of preparation for the Passover. And it was about noon. He said to the Jews, Here is your King." They cried out, "Away with him, away with Him, crucify him." Pilate asked them, "Shall I crucify your king?" The chief priests answered, "We have no king but Caesar." Then he handed him over to them to be crucified. So they took Jesus and, carrying the cross by himself, he went out to what is called the place of the skull, which in Hebrew is called Golgotha. There, they crucified Him, and with two others, one on either side, with Jesus between them. Pilate also had an inscription written and put on the cross, It read, Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews. Many of the Jews read this inscription because the place where Jesus was crucified was near the city. And it was written in Hebrew, in Latin and in Greek. Then the chief priests of the Jews said to Pilate, "Do not write the King of the Jews. But this man said, I am King of the Jews." Pilate answered, "What I have written, I have written." When the soldiers had crucified Jesus, they took his clothes and divided them into four parts, one for each soldier. They also took his tunic. Now the tunic was seamless, woven in one piece from the top. So they said to one another, "Let us not tear it, but cast lots for it to see who will get it." This was to fulfill what the scripture says. 'They divided my clothes among themselves. And for my clothing, they cast lots.' And that is what the soldiers did. Meanwhile, standing near the cross of Jesus, where his mother and his mother's sister, Mary, the wife of Clopus, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus saw his mother and the disciple whom he loved standing beside her, he said to his mother, "Woman, here is your son." Then he said to the disciple, "Here is your mother." And from that hour, the disciple took her into his own home. After this, when Jesus knew that all was now finished, he said, in order to fulfill the scripture, "I am thirsty." A jar full of sour wine was standing there. So they put a sponge full of the wine on a branch of hyssop and held it to his mouth. When Jesus had received the wine, he said, "It is finished." Then he bowed his head and gave up his Spirit.

Lord, you sit in silence, but it is too late for you to be quiet. You have said too much. You have fought too much. You have challenged everything that makes us feel secure. You weren't sensible, you know, in the way you did things. You exaggerated and threatened people, and they were bound to catch up with you in the end. You called the religious people a load of wets and you told them that their hearts were like sewers, and that all their rituals stank to high heavens. You didn't mix with the right people, Jesus. You didn't only go and visit those left rot in prison cells and mental hospitals. You loved them laughed and sang with them when the rest of us were scared to death about our own health and safety. You talked with people who felt cheated by the system, and you gave them hope on the streets in grotty housing and down on the dole. No wonder the authorities were worried. You sacrificed security for the life of the homeless, traveling in often tough places and spending time with those who needed you the most. You spent little time inside religious buildings. And when you turned over the "Trinkets for Jesus" stalls, no wonder they didn't ask you back. You reduced thousands of years of theology into one little command to love your neighbor as yourself. How hard that is? Well, now they've caught you. But as you stand before the frantic crowd, you know that it is not you in whom the Spirit has died. Help us to follow You, Lord. We've grown used to the comfort of other people's praise. And it's not easy for us to stand alone as you did. So give us the courage to go against the crowd, to die to self interest, and so to overcome evil in the world today.
